Dear Commissioner Mayes:

Inasmuch as we will be unable to attend your "open meeting" regarding LPSCO, we wanted to let you know our concerns about the odor problem.

We attended a meeting on November 8, 2006, wherein Bob Dodds, President of Algonquin, was present and he turned the meeting over to the engineer from Corollo Engineering.

We are sure you were advised of their report on Phase 1, which should be implemented 100% by the end of 2006, and Phase 2, which should be implemented 100% by June 30, 2007. If plans go according to their schedule, there should not be an odor at all by the end of Phase 2.

It seems that the only way they have "moved on this situation" is by our prodding, complaining continuously and whatever requirements the Commission has put on them. The odor is still there. Yes, it is not as frequent; however, the fact is that it is there.

Algonquin also stated that they were planning on building another facility near Sarival and McDowell in the near future. If that is the case, there should be in excess of 6000 homes that could be affected by the same problems that we are experiencing at the present time. Would it be adequate enough to handle of all the proposed construction for our area? Would it start out and continue to be odor free, unlike the existing McDowell plant? If and when a new permit is granted for Algonquin, what guarantees will you require before they are allowed to operate?

Thank you for your time and consideration regarding this matter.

Sincerely,

Janet and Richard Kirshbaum
